ABOUT ME

I am passionate about helping individuals and families. For over fourteen years I have worked in the non-profit and small business sectors. I orchestrated a successful grassroots advocacy campaign that changed the law and executed a public education campaign around intimate partner violence that reached over 2.9 million people. I have worked with survivors of sexual assault, children, families, adults with mild to chronic severe mental illness, and professionals in the workplace. For years I facilitated community-based prevention programs as well as school-based empowerment groups. The extensive macro experience I have in shaping systems that directly impact individuals allows me a unique perspective to empower clients. Trauma resolution through secure attachment is my primary focus.
